Preface to Volumes II and III

These volumes contain a subject-matter index to the principal publications of fifty international trade unions and federations of trade unions. The coverage of the index and the methods used in preparing it were described in Volume I, Chapter 2, and additional explanatory notes appear at the beginning of this volume.

The importance of reading this material before attempting to use the index cannot be stated too strongly.

The reader should also be warned that the fifteen hundred headings used herein provide a rather fine fragmentation of the subject-matter. A considerable number of headings may thus be relevant to any subject of study. It was not possible to indicate by cross-references more than a few of the many interrelationships among subject headings, particularly since the degree of relationship is frequently contingent on the analytical framework being used. Anyone planning to work on a subject of considerable scope should begin by reading through the entire list of index headings to make sure that he has not overlooked any relevant material.

We are grateful to Miss Blanche Coll and Mrs. Edna Edwards for their diligent editing of the index references, and to Mrs. Agnes Pennington for competent assistance in the preparation and proofreading of the manuscript.
